CHANGE

The Times 'R' Chang'in

by Stephanie Parks

"We always wish for money,
We always wish for fame,
We think we have the answers,
Some things are never going to CHANGE.
CHANGE, It doesn't matter who you are,
It's all the same."

—John Waite "CHANGE"

It doesn't really matter who you are. Everyone at some time or another goes through a change. Whether it being a different fashion, or a new haircut, or even a change in attitude, all students change at some point during their four years of high school.

Not only do the students change, but so does LHS itself. This year alone we have witnessed Channel One, the building of a new library facility, and new school hours. Also there is new faculty, new tones, and the dreaded two books for English class.

Hopefully everyone has changed in some way, and even if you think you haven't, take a look around, because the TIMES 'R' CHANG'IN!

Have Fun

"I think the students are now saying it's 'cool' to have fun." Mr. Johnson.

SCHOOL CHANGES!

LHS Innovations

Students old and new found the school year, 1990-91, would be one of various change. Probably the most innovative was Channel One. The 14 minute newscast was presented every morning to the school. Taped the evening (actually early morning) before, the program was piped to several rooms through the school during first hour. Due to the length of Channel One, first period was stretched. Homerooms, the beginning of school in the past, was used only in certain situations. The time change allowed for a new clock system to keep all the changes correct.

From another perspective, the next most prominent change was the re-modeling of the library. Enclosing the old open area below the office, the new area was hailed by all as being much quieter and more conducive to quiet study.

Continued efforts to make LHS an even better, more responsive place for students to learn will still be seen. Lowell High School has ongoing plans to carry through into the next Century, long after these new changes are common events.

"If I could do it all again, even knowing what the outcome would be, I would do it all again."

FRIENDS BROADWAY

THAT'S WHAT WE ARE

by Kristen Nemeth

"Ladies and Gentlemen, here she is, Lowell High School's Young Woman of the Year."

On September 15, the new young woman, Samantha Stinnett was crowned.

The Young Woman contest had several categories, including fitness, poise, creating and performing arts, scholastic achievement, and a panel evaluation. Although scoring in these categories may be important in winning, according to the participants being with friends, and becoming friends with the other participants was the most important.

"I made friends with people whom I had not been friends with before, and I got the chance to really get to know people whom I had not had the opportunity to talk to before," first runner up Jari Johnson.

Young Miss First Runner up Jari Johnson parades in front of the crowd.

"The twelve participants had plenty of time to get to know each other through practices and parties, but practicing on their own was also important," Johnson added.

"All of the practicing brought us closer together," said Holly Bright.

Many of the participants found this event bringing them to the stage for the first time.

"The first time I went out there I was nervous, but after that everything else was great," said Val Cole.

Cole also summed up the experience, "If I could do it again, even knowing what the outcome would be, I would do it all over again."

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Samantha Stinnett was second-runner up at the state competition. She also received a $1000 scholarship. She was the first girl from Lowell to place at the state level since 1963.

All twelve participants hold hands, and await the announcement of the winner.

Participants get their hair done before the contest.

Seniors Take All!

by Stephanie Parks

Senior Holly Bright could not contain her excitement as she proclaimed the Seniors as winners of Spirit Week competition.

And win spirit week they did! Seniors took first place in the float competition, a first in spirit week participation, and the Senior/Freshman team defeated the Junior/Sophomore football team, 40-6.

The only thing the seniors did not win was the decorating of the commons areas, which the freshman class claimed.

New to the Homecoming festivities this year were the parade down Commercial Avenue and the poster contest sponsored by I-Club and the Booster Club. The parade replaced the pulled wagon parade held in the gym.

“I liked it so much better this year. We were the ones to get it our senior year and I'm proud of that,” said senior Karen Swarens.

Trying to beat the other administrators, Mr. Dhanau pedals down the court on his tricycle. He was able to win the competition with a little help from senior Mike Schmidt.

The poster contest, the other new addition was for each of the fall sport teams to make posters to cheer on the other sports. The first place poster went to the Freshman Girl's Volleyball Team, senior Brian Vance received second place, and the cheerleaders finished up in third.

Seniors Missy Hayden and Lee Childress were the recipients of the King and Queen honors. They were crowned during halftime of the football game, which Lowell lost to Highland 42-0.

Even though the athletic teams were not successful during the week, the individual classes took on spirit week with a winning attitude of their own.

Putting the final touches on the senior class float, the seniors prepare to go down Commercial Avenue.

Even though the senior class came in last past with the cammons decorations, it was the first thing students saw when they entered Devils Cammons every day.

Showing his spirit for the teachers, Mr. Barlowe wears his red, white, and blue striped pants for patriotic day. Teachers came in last place.

Autumn's Action Games and Dances! Fun!

by Nicole Barker

As school and fall arrivè, LHS students see their activities change from the outdoor to the indoor. Helping provide the transition are Homecoming activities and the Halloween dance.

The Homecoming game against Highland High School gave the Red Devil student body dances, parades, and, of course, the game. Week's events were highlighted by the crowning of the Queen and King at half-time of the football game.

Come Halloween time, the action moved to the indoors with the club-sponsored costume dance. Disguised dancers paraded and showed-off their colorful costumes.

With the chill in the air and the shortness of days, the students looked back fondly upon warm autumn days, and they trudged grudgingly forward to the new changes that winter would pose.

ATTRACTIVE ASSEMBLIES

With the help of their lifters, the cheerleaders work to build the crowd's spirit.

Taking a break from the Senior Seminars are foreign exchange students Malin Petersson, Christina Verdugo, Miranda Tas, and Maria Tybergson.

Students settle in and teachers count heads before viewing the Motivational Media Program.

Mr. Sam Rhine responds to a question while preparing for his talk to Seniors on April 19.

Seniors find their way and get seated in the Little Theatre for one of the Senior Seminars.

Backed by the Senior co-captains, Michael T. Schmidt addresses the crowd at the Homecoming pep session.

The 1990-1991 school year had its share of varied assemblies and pep sessions for Red Devil students. The frenzied pep rallies for the homecoming football game with Highland and for the unbeaten basketball team gave way to more sober and inspirational assemblies. While ISTEP and California tests were being given to the underclassmen, the Seniors were attending seminars aimed at their futures, questions they need to deal with, or other topical issues. In April, Motivational Media, through the sponsorship of Pepsi-Cola, brought its message "be drug free" to the students. A few days later, Mr. Sam Rhine addressed Freshmen and Seniors on topics of genetics and health. Whether for lifting of spirit or for broadening of mind, LHS convos attracted the interest of all who attended.

LHS Theatre Presents

"The Matchmaker"

by Liz Baker and Heather Schutz.

Taking to the stage on November 9-11, the cast and crew for the "Matchmaker", Thornton Wilder's delightful play about 1800's society, were challenged by the era's setting, accents, and mannerisms. Both cast and director, Miss Lynn Engle, easily faced the challenge and presented a great production. "The student actors we had were great," praised Miss Engle., "and that is what made the show such a success." Added cast member Brent Johnson, "The play was a good experience for me because of its challenges, but also because I had the chance to be around friends and staff."

Set in Yonkers, New York in the late 1800's, the production dealt with the exploits and efforts of Mrs. Dolly Levi (Samantha Stinnett) to marry off Mr. Horace Vandergelder (Kevin Weaver). Through many mismatches and mistakes, Dolly eventually finds a match of her own, and the play ends on a truly happy note. All of this accomplished to the delight of the play's audiences.

Brent Johnson delivers a thoughtful monologue about women.

Samantha Stinnett and Kevin Weaver are seen discussing the upcoming marriage proposal for Mr. Vandergelder.

Inspires! Godspell

At the beginning of the play, thoughts on life and religion are discussed by the cast.

For two week-ends at the end of April, the Lowell community was treated to the inspiring performance of Godspell as presented by the LHS Theatre group. Based upon the New Testament Scripture, the musical was directed by Miss Lynn Engle, with Miss Rebecca Osborn conducting the musical and instrumental portion. Chosen by Miss Engle because, "It has all the elements that make it a favorite of mine, a funny script, fun special effects, a moving theme, wonderful songs, and audience impact."

That impact was also felt by cast members. Todd Pflughoeft, who had the lead role as Jesus, reflected upon what being in this production had meant to him. After thinking a moment, Todd replied, "No, I didn't know anything about Godspell, I'll never forget it." That easily sums up feelings of all who saw Godspell, a moving, inspiring production.

John the Baptist (Dan Hurst) baptizes Jesus (Todd Pflughoeft).

Todd Pflughoeft—"Maybe the one great thing about the play was that Miss Engle gave us the freedom to add some of our own ideas and make changes. This was really our own play."

The cast look to Jesus for inspiration as he delivers a sermon.

The ensemble dance and sing directly to the audience.

Tony Gorboll and Andy Hendricks rehearse their actions and songs in preparation for opening night.

Tony Gorboll—"I'll never forget the closeness and family atmosphere the cast developed. . . It was just about the best production I've been a part of."

What is your idea of a good time on a Friday night? For LHS Freshman Football Coaches it is going to other schools to scout the teams that the Varsity will be playing the following Friday.

"When we go scouting we take books to look for the tendencies of the offense, and the stunts and tactics of the defense," said Freshman Coach Mark Line. "It's hectic at times, especially getting done with Freshman practice, and then getting to the game to scout," he added.

When the coaches get back from the game they are scouting, the Varsity game is already concluded. The following day the coaches and players assemble to view the game on videotape. After viewing the game the coaches and players discuss the areas that the team needs to improve on, also the areas that the team is strongest in, then they develop their game plan from there. "It tells us about each player and let's us know what we're up against," said Senior Jason Kuiper. "You don't think about what you are up against during the game, you just worry about what your assignment on the field is," Kuiper added.

When asked about scouting, Freshman Football Coach Mark Line commented, "Scouting is not that good of a system, but you can't go into something blind."

Wanted Runner

Must be wild, crazy, and outrageous!

by Troy Phillips

WANTED: A wild, crazy, and outrageous, person who would like to run for one of the LHS Cross Country teams. If interested call 696-7733 and ask for Mr. Naumowich or Mr. Thomas.

Answering the ad this year were 10 boys and 5 girls. Each runner contributed his or her own craziness to both teams.

For instance, sophomore Erin Seydel, decided after she ran, she was not going to smell like sweat.

"It was hot and humid all day, so I put deodorant all over my body so that if I sweated, I wouldn't smell," said Seydel. "Then I got a lecture from Coach about clogging my pores, and how they couldn't breath," Seydel added.

It wasn't only the girls who pulled outrageous antics, the boys added their fair share too.

After the Conference meet was over, Aaron Robinson decided he had enough of the rain, cold, and mud after he had finished the race.

"He told us (team) that he was going to jump into Lemon Lake, and we didn't think he was serious, then the next thing we know, he was actually swimming," said Scott Goins. "He ended up with more mud on him when he got out of the lake, than he had on him when he went in," Goins added.

Not only do you have to be crazy, but you have to be able to run also. The girls ended the season-, and the boys ended the season with wins and losses. Looks like these folks definately fit the description of the ad.

Holding off her apponent, Erin Seydel tries to pull ahead to win the race.

Coming out of the woods, Mike Schmidt picks up his pace as the race draws to a clse.

Preparing himself before a meet, junior Brent Jahnsn takes the time to stretch his musles.

Cheerleaders

By Sam Stinnett

"1-2 IDownUp!" Sound familiar? It's just typical cheerleading-lifter lingo. The Varsity recruited 7 enthusiastic guys to join the squad and lift spirits for the basketball season.

"We've had a blast with the guys, and they have been so fun to work with," said Captain Holly Bright.

However, good and safe lifting is more than just fun. "I think the guys are surprised that there is more to lifting than just throwing the Cheerleaders around," stated Melissa Grugel.

Agreeing, Brian Vance declared, "It was a little harder than I expected; all those slim, petite, girls seemed to weigh a lot!"

Upon their stage debut, the lifters greeted hoots and hollers from fascinated fans along with some heckling from their buddies.

Despite the discouragement from their peers, the cheerleaders lifters proved they were serious about doing a job well done. "Who cares what I do? It's for the good of the school," added Vance

Trainers: Changing

Under the direction of Mis Tanya Wheeler, three LHS students have been seen at more athletic events this year than ever before. Sheila Starrick, Julie Smith, and Diane Wolgemuth have served all year as assistant athletic trainers. These young ladies have taped joints, bandaged cuts, and learned how to deal with many, varied injuries that athletes may sustain. For the trainers, the experience has been rewarding. "I really feel that we've helped some of the really hurt players get better," states Sheila Starrick.

"I would hope that everyone understands just how we have worked hard to help all the players and coaches this year," adds Head Trainer Tanya Wheeler, "Let's hope we get to do it all again next year!"

Freshmen at Work

What was better or worse about Freshman year?

Chris Kukelka—"Better. There were more cute, eligible women to look at."

Amie Lindsay—"Better. The people seem to be nicer and there are more things to do after school."

Kevin Symons—"Worse. School seems much bigger; there are more people and freshmen seem lowest in order for things."

Change for the Better? Students Take To Streets.

by Kristen Nemeth
E-D-U-C-A-T-I-O-N!

No matter how it's viewed or spelled, in early 1991 the Indiana Legislature voted to change education at Lowell and statewide by decreasing moneys to the schools. Caused by the recession, the decreased funding forced teacher lay-offs and the cutting of many Tri-Creek School programs.

Feeling the need to act, LHS students took events into their own forms of protest. In early May, several students organized a protest march that started at the high school, rolled downtown to the middle school, and ended at the Administration Building. Even though school administrators sympathized with the over-200 participants, Principal Roger Luekens indicated that those involved in the protest would face disciplinary problems unless parents gave permission to march.

The student involvement didn't end with the march. Superintendent Yeoman took some student leaders to Indianapolis to face the legislature. Students addressed the school board to plead for extra-curricular activities, and many students wrote letters to legislators for increased spending.

As the 1991-92 school year approached, Tri-Creek students faced the loss of many good programs, teachers, and extra-curricular clubs and athletics. Certainly the short-sightedness of the legislature will change the shape of education at LHS.

At the Statehouse, a South Bend reporter interviews Governor Evan Bayh about the school budget crisis.

After Lowell Police helped escort the marchers through town, Officer Oliveria speaks with the crowd.

Discussing the consequences if students protest, Dr. Luekens gets assistance from Charlie Winebrenner.

Left: LHS students Deb Heath, Lori Poppe, and John Kunstman carry signs and march for school funding while in Indianapolis.

This Year Has CHANGED!

CHANGES We Have Seen!

Persian Gulf War:

As the school year began all eyes and ears of the school were turned to the Persian Gulf. In August, armed forces of Iraq invaded the small country of Kuwait. While America and its United Nations allies massed in the Middle East, LHS and its community anxiously awaited news from the region. Not only did they wait, but students also became part of the National attention. NBC's TODAY Show came to Lowell and highlighted the town, school, and basketball team as a show of how Small Town America was handling the war. For about ten minutes on a Monday morning in the winter, Lowell High School was showcased throughout the United States.

With yellow ribbons tying up the town, Red Devils joined programs and said prayers after the shooting started on Jan. 16th. The question, "Where were you when you heard about the bombing?" was one tossed about by nearly everyone. When the lightning ground war was concluded just weeks later, we were all thankful that this crisis had run its course.

As we think of change, we must all wonder how the war in the Persian Gulf will have changed us. The swiftness of the bombing and all the high-tech may have altered war forever. Certainly, for seven months of the school year, we were part of events that many of us may never forget.

The headline of THE TIMES proclaims the fact we all lived with for most of the 1990-91 school year.

Thunder and Lightning!

To the standing ovation from the crowd, the Devils display their patriotic feelings.

SCOPE magazine ran articles for students about the first women in combat (left) and most of the world's support for the bombing of Iraq. These pictures were included in those articles.

Change!

When that word was chosen as the theme of the 1990-91 yearbook, little did anyone realize how much meaning it would hold. Change has been the easiest way to describe work on the Lowellian. The journalism class was gone, replaced by an extra-curricular club. Mr. Aaron Greve assumed command as the new adviser. Work was completed in the upstairs resource area of the English pod. Many upperclassmen who toiled on the previous book were relieved by several new faces.

At one time or another, the Lowellian staff included: Kelly Henderson, Sam Stinnett, Stephanie Parks, Kim McWilliams, Bob Berrier, Kris Nemeth, Ryan Bottiger, Troy Phillips, Liz Baker, Nicole Barker, Mike Conley, Michelle Gleason, Heather Schutz, and Doug Snell. Without their efforts, no 1991 yearbook would've been completed.

Change!

Time to Reflect.

As this edition of the Lowellian comes to a lasting close, we'd like to take time to think about this completed year. Looking at all the things that have occurred, we can't help but feel awe-struck, but relieved. The noise of fall-time construction has been replaced by the tranquility of the new library. The winds of war are now replaced by the breezes of summertime peace. The clamor of the halls has been silenced with the coming of vacation. We hope that all of the school year's events will be a blissful memory whenever anyone glances through this book.

"Thank you" to the few, the proud, the staff. Those who really put time in will be amply rewarded with praise. A "Thanks" to Marlene Zloza and the Lowell Tribune for their help. To the Parent-Teacher Association and it's president. Mrs. Ernst, "Thanks". To all the staff of LHS and the faculty, "Thanks in Bunches".

Along with the thank you's, please accept our apologies if you were omitted. First year advisers and an extra-curricular staff tend to make several errors. Forgive us our mistakes. If given the chance, we'll be bigger and better next year.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of older people, and the importance of ensuring that they are able to live independently for as long as possible. This has led to a number of initiatives aimed at improving the health and well-being of older people, including the development of new services and the training of health care professionals.

One of the key areas of focus is the need to ensure that older people have access to the services they need, and that these services are delivered in a way that is appropriate to their needs. This includes the need to ensure that older people have access to health care services, social care services, and housing services, and that these services are delivered in a way that is accessible, affordable, and of high quality.
